“ Every day I still catch myself staring at the telephone at 7 am. Waiting for his first call of the day,& at 9 am on sat,& sun. I still want to pick up the phone and call him when I need someone to talk to about things. It has been like this for two and a half years now with the daily calls.I moved to maine just to be closer to him as it was such a long drive to visit him from pa. We always visit at least 1 x a week,I miss my brother so so much.I just wish he would have made peace with all his kids,so he could have seen how good they are.I will miss my brother every day. They say it gets easier everyday, but it has not as of yet.The one thing that did come of this ,Is now I am going to get to know the rest of my family and thier children. I just wish this good have happen before he passed away. Like my husband says to me all the time, Dennis is not suffering pain daily, due to his legs where he lived in a wheel chair & the cancer thru out his body. Dennis knew he had only about a month left,now he is at peace. I love him so much and will always miss him. his loving sister, Terrisue
